

THE WRITING MINOR

Want to pursue a career as a teacher, editor, journalist, grant writer, or publisher? Considering a career in web development, law, business, fundraising, public relations, advertising, or marketing?

If so, effective writing is critical to your success.

In fact, employers in a variety of fields actively seek graduates who can demonstrate their fluency in reading, writing, and speaking.

The English Department has expanded its writing minor to include courses designed to help you develop a complex understanding of writing in the 21st century.

New courses like Editing and Desktop Publishing give you experience producing and reflecting on the kinds of texts emerging in today's technology rich landscape. And courses like Rhetorical Approaches to Everyday Discourse give you opportunities to engage with theories about writers, audiences, and the power of the written word.

You can learn more about the minor in the "Courses" section of the English Department Website <<http://www2.mcdaniel.edu/English>>. If you have any specific questions, feel free to contact Kate Dobson <kdobson@mcdaniel.edu> or Julia Jasken <jjasken@mcdaniel.edu>.

TAKE THREE: Intermediate Writing Courses

ENGL 2206	Creative Writing - Poetry	Mangan
ENGL 2207	Creative Writing - Fiction	Mangan
ENGL 2208	Advanced Comp. - Prose Style	Dobson
ENGL 2211	Grammar and Usage *	Spence
ENGL 2212	Professional Communication	Jasken
ENGL 2214	Editing and Desktop Publishing	Jasken
ENGL 2204	Advanced News Reporting and Writing	Dalton

TAKE ONE: Advanced Professional Communication

ENGL 3307	Writing in Digital Environments	Jasken
ENGL 3308	Writing in Law and Policy	Dobson
ENGL 33XX	Writing in Professional Contexts Internship, with writing focus	Jasken T.B.D.

TAKE ONE: Theories of Language and Rhetoric

ENGL 3306	Approaches to the Study of Language	Spence
ENGL 3309	Rhet. Appr. to Everyday Discourse	Dobson
ENGL 3310	Rhet. Appr. to Nonfiction Lit.	Dobson

* You may count either 2211 or 3306, but you may not count both.