

Comparative History of Ideas Program, in collaboration with Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies and Law, Societies and Justice Program--Assistant Professor

The Comparative History of Ideas Program, in collaboration with the Henry M. Jackson School of International Studies and the Law, Societies and Justice Program at the University of Washington, invites applications for a tenure track appointment at the assistant professor level in the comparative study of responses to traumatic civil violence and cultural conflict. Applicants should have the Ph.D. degree, or be in the final stages of the Ph.D. program, by the start of appointment.

University of Washington faculty engage in teaching, research and service. Candidates should be prepared to develop a research and teaching agenda that engages the dilemmas and challenges of post-conflict societies from an interdisciplinary, transnational perspective, with an emphasis on ethical and cultural factors, and should be conversant with debates over local-global ties and the legacies of colonialism and imperialism. Duties include supervision of thematically related foreign study programs and involvement in the development of the Clowes Center for Conflict and Dialogue Studies.

Applications, including a curriculum vita, a statement of research and teaching interests and three letters of recommendation should be sent to:

Search Committee
Comparative History of Ideas Program
Box 354300
University of Washington
Seattle, WA 98195

Electronic submissions will not be accepted. Review of applications will begin on November 15, 2005 and continue until the position is filled.

The University of Washington is building a culturally diverse faculty and strongly encourages applications from female and minority candidates; the institution is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.